"HUD/DOT/EPA 3 federal agencies, got together for the first time in our history, and offered this opportunity for regions to create a sustainable plan. Looking 25 years into the future, saying, "Where do we want to be 25 years from now." Looking at it from an Economic Viability ... looking at it from an environmental stewardship point of view and socially responsible practices as well. We wanted to make sure that all the work was grass-roots driven and that the plans were coming from community." (Cheryl Lee Hillis, Executive Director, Region 5 Development Commission)

How does this sustainable regional planning impact you?

"Part of the reason I am so intrigued by the regional planning efforts is because I love living here. I am looking forward to a future here and in order for that to be prosperous and possible I want it to be sustainable." (Quinn Swanson; Non-Profit - Food and Water)

"I am not so much interested in the future for myself because I might not be here that much longer. I am interested in the future for my children and my grandchildren ... and the future of everyone else - that is why I am on this committee." (Art & Jan Warner; Non-Profit - Historical Preservation)
