Assisting 27 towns in southeastern Vermont to provide effective local government and work cooperatively with them to address regional issues.
“Such pondering on the facts of gravity and the fluidity of water shows us that the golden rule speaks to a condition of absolute interdependency and obligation. People who live on rivers – or, in fact, anywhere in a watershed – might rephrase the rule in this way: Do unto those downstream as you’d have those upstream do unto you.”

- Wendell Berry from “Watershed and Commonwealth” in The Citizenship Papers.
